Terminologies and descriptors

Dignity is about respectful, responsible, fair and humane behaviour, something that is reflected in the constitution.

Disadvantage is where, as a result of discrimination, an individual or group is deprived of some or all resources and opportunities. This may affect people directly or indirectly.

Discrimination

a) Direct discrimination

Direct discrimination occurs where someone is treated less favourably directly because of: • a legally protected characteristic they possess (see below) - this is direct discrimination; and/or

- a protected characteristic of someone they are associated with, such as a friend, family member or colleague - this is direct discrimination by association; and/or
- a protected characteristic they are thought to have, regardless of whether this perception by others is actually correct or not - this is direct discrimination by perception.

b) Indirect discrimination

This type of discrimination is usually less obvious than direct discrimination and can often be unintended. In law, it is where a provision, criterion or practice is applied equally to a group of people, but has (or will have) the effect of putting those who share a certain protected characteristic at a particular disadvantage when compared to others in the group

c) Harassment

Harassment is defined as unwanted conduct that violates people's dignity or creates an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment." In determining whether conduct can reasonably be considered as having such effect, the perception of the Complainant will be taken into account. Employees can now complain of behaviour they find offensive even if it is not directed at them.

d) Victimisation

Victimisation is illegal and considered to take place when someone is treated badly because they have made/supported a complaint or grievance.

'Positive action'

The general positive action provisions in the Equality Act 2010 seek to address disadvantage and under-representation among protected groups, not only in employment generally but also in relation to the provision of services and public functions. Measures which are targeted at the protected groups are permitted if they are a proportionate means of the aim of enabling or encouraging persons to overcome or minimise disadvantage; or meeting the different needs of the protected group; or enabling or encouraging persons in protected groups to participate in an activity.

Prejudice

Is literally pre-judging someone. It is usually led by negative, irrational feelings, resulting from preconceived attitudes and opinions.

Protected characteristics

Age, being or becoming a transsexual person, being married or in a civil partnership, being pregnant or on maternity leave, disability, race (including colour nationality, ethnic or national origin), religion, belief or lack of religion or belief, sex, sexual orientation

Stereotyping

Is grouping or labelling people because they are members of a particular 'visible' group, and assuming that they have particular traits that are considered to be characteristics of that group.
